

Jennifer Lamont Leo

With a passion for all things historical, Jennifer Lamont Leo writes historical fiction set in the early 20th century. Her debut novel, “You’re the Cream in My Coffee,” set in Roaring Twenties Chicago, was published in September 2016 by Lighthouse Publishing of the Carolinas. A sequel, tentatively titled “Tea for Two,” is slated for publication in early 2018.

In addition to fiction, she has written many magazine articles on regional and historical topics and co-authored a nonfiction book of regional history. She is also a marketing copywriter and editor.

Jennifer blogs about “A Sparkling Vintage Life” on her website (JenniferLamontLeo.com) and about the Roaring Twenties at Miss Marjorie's Jazz Age Journal (MarjorieCorrigan.blogspot.com). She is also a playwright and actress. Her plays, including the comedy-melodrama Baked Alaska and a one-woman historical portrayal, One Thing Certain: I Will Not Cry, were both critically acclaimed. She has written several “History Mystery” drama productions on behalf of the Bonner County History Museum.
