

Deborah A Elster was born in Herkimer, New York. Her love for the outdoors and the mountains was fostered while spending summers at the family's Adirondack camp in Old Forge, New York. She has had an interesting and varied career as a Physical Therapist for over forty-two years. Referred to as "gypsy daughter" by her mother, she, along with her husband and two beautiful children, have traveled and moved many times throughout the US. Having lived full-time in their motorhome for over six years, she and her husband have now set roots down in the panhandle of Idaho with their two dogs. After writing many non-fiction articles on various topics, her love for writing now brings you her first novel.
